

A DOUBLE MURDER.

turned home about 11.30 o'clock. From this time on I hung around the house until about three o'clock when I went to the brook and returning shortly afterwards found my sister lying dead downstairs and my mother shot to death on the upper floor.

"Fearing that there might be robbers around I thought it would be best to put my grandfather in a closet, but this he refused to do. I then took the rifle and went out to seek the murderer."

Several times during this story, which was brought out by questions from the State's attorney, the boy is said to have contradicted himself. An investigation of the house disclosed his room to be a small arsenal. It was rigged out with all sorts of guns and revolvers. Mr. Sweet, who is 103 years old, was in a state of nervous collapse, but he partially confirmed the boy's story. There were only these two in the house at the time of the murder and the old man says he heard shots, three of them, and then shortly afterwards Arthur came rushing in to his room and wanted to put him in a closet, but he refused to go. The boy then took his rifle and left the house.

A possible motive for the crime has been discovered. About a year ago when the father died all the property including the farm, valued at about $1,000 was left to Arthur. Directly after the will was probated, Mr. Sweet put in his bill for services which amounted to about $1,000 and the farm was directly turned over to his daughter. This had caused a great deal of trouble and there had been wordy arguments over the affair on several occasions.

AMUSEMENTS.

University of Vermont Musical Clubs at The Colonial Wednesday, March 22.

The University of Vermont Musical clubs have arranged to give a concert at The Colonial Wednesday evening, March 22. "The Rosary."

When Rowland & Clifford's new play "The Rosary" by Edward E. Rose comes to the Colonial March 23 the discriminating public will be given an opportunity to see pictures before them the growing unrest and and irreligion of our times. It is a faithful picture of misery and unhappiness that surely comes upon a man who lacks faith in the supreme good and its triumph in our world. Can one evil mind poison a whole household? Is the human brain capable of producing disastrous effects upon a household by adverse suggestive thoughts? Do we test adequately how our mental attitudes influence our lives and the lives about us? And the answer? Well, the play is the answer.

LETTER FROM SENATOR PAGE.

Wants Vermonters to Express Themselves on Canadian Reciprocity.

Hyde Park, Vermont, March 14, 1911.

Editor of Caledonian:

I probably do not need assure you that I should like to support President Taft in his efforts to establish reciprocity between the United States and Canada, if in so doing I should be faithfully conserving the best interests of Vermont.

From the best information I am able to obtain the newly elected senators are nearly all in favor of reciprocity, and I think the probabilities are that a majority of the senate which convenes on the 4th of next month will favor reciprocity.

The press of Vermont seem, very largely, to be supporters of this measure, and were I to be guided by the opinions expressed by the newspapers of Vermont, I should of course heartily second the President's efforts upon this important measure.

On the other hand, if I am to be governed by the wishes of my Vermont constituents as expressed in their numerous letters to me, I could not do otherwise than vote against reciprocity.

You know, I am sure, that I am exceedingly anxious to pursue that course which will most nearly reflect the wishes, and best promote the welfare, of the people of Vermont, and whatever my final action may be touching the matter, I am sure that action will be predicated upon a desire, as solicited as the most loyal son of Vermont could wish, to faithfully serve the state which has commissioned me, with others, to act for it in matters coming before the National Congress.

I would esteem it an especial favor if you would promptly bring this matter to the attention of your readers and, if you deem it wise to do so, ask them to send you for publication (or otherwise as you deem best) their views on Canadian reciprocity, to the end that when I return to Washington I may be informed as fully as possible as to the views of my state on this subject.

Personally, I shall be pleased to receive communications from any who feel sufficiently interested in reciprocity to prompt them to write me, and such communications, unless otherwise requested, shall be laid before my colleagues in Washington, either before or at the time of my return, April 4.

In writing you this letter I am speaking for myself only, and not for my colleagues, although I presume they feel as I do about the matter.

Very cordially yours,
C. S. PAGE.

Editor St. Johnsbury Caledonian, St. Johnsbury, Vermont.

The method of talc mining at East Granville is told with pictures of the plant and the aerial tramway, a novelty in the east. Sugaring and the Morgan horse are touched upon, and there is an original tale of the northern woods, illustrated by Maude Perrin. An important article in this issue of the state magazine is a consideration of Vermont dairy prospects by Orlando L. Martin, state commissioner of agriculture.
